Alpine Towns on the road to climate neutrality

Hubert Buhl, president of the “Alpine Town of the Year Association”

Key messages from the presentation:

Alpine towns towards climate neutrality:

- In the Alps most of the people live in towns. Due to the concentration of people, values and infrastructure, the Alpine towns have a high responsibility.
- Climate change takes place and represents the most serious challenge for humankind in this century. Therefore, towns will need a strategic climate policy.
- Alpine towns are the driving force and key factor behind the implementation of a global climate policy. All towns will benefit from innovation, experience and exchange.
